Newport News Wedding.

One of the most elaborate weddings the season was celebrated before at large and fashionable assemblage Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church, Newport News, when the daughter of Mrs. Martha Houston Holt, Margaret Ella, became the bride of William Gemmel Hobertson, of Wilmington, N. C. The collecting mighter was the paster Bay. liciating minister was the pastor, Rev. T. Wellford, D. D.

The church was beautifully deco-ated, the altar being a mass of palms, erns, and yellow and white chrysan-hemums. The sections for the fami-les were marked with tall vases of cllow chrysanthemums. A rainbow ef-ect was attained in the selection of se gowns of the attendants, each wear-ig a different color.

Before the arrival of the bridal party, irs. Edwin Felier sang "An Old Country Wedding Fong." At the entry of he bride, with her cousin, Harry N. Phillips, of Richmond, who gave her in narriage, Miss Ella Davis rendered the wedding march from "Lohengrin." The bride's gown was fashioned of ivory satin, with court train, and draped in real lace and pearls. Her veil of tulle lell from a Juliet cap and was caught with lilies of the valley, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and illes of the valley.

BY LILLIAN RUSSELL.

(Copyright, 1914, by Lillian Russell.) Care of the nose is essential to the appearance, and also to the health of every person. The exterior appearance of that important facial feature is invariably indicative of the condition of the interior. The nose needs more than a dab of powder to keep it in shape for the proper performance of its duties.

The nasal channels are of delicate construction. So tender, in fact, is the membrane lining that nature has made special provision for its protec-tion and care.

The eye, like a reservoir, constantly

The eye, like a reservoir, constantly provides a supply of fluid to cleanse these channels. Nature is generally assisted in this work, and in the form of assistance offered great harm is often wrought.

No person would think of permitting the mouth to go unwashed, and the nose deserves just the same attention. However, in giving this attention the nose is often thoughtlessly abused to such an extent that the consequences. such an extent that the consequences they might apply to a fog horn are intricating the very cause which makes the blowing necessary. They not only offend the sense of others, but they injure themselves.

The nostrils should always be cleaned and cleared with the greatest care. They are too delicate to withstand rough usage. The nose is so important that when its functions are not properly performed the effects are not only felt, but are also in evidence. The appearance of the nose may be affected by various organic troubles, it is true, but it is also under the influence of the treatment accorded the nasal channels. If the nostrils and nasal channels were given more care there would be better looking noses and less catarrhal troubles and colds.

Remember: It takes more than a powder puff to make the nose presentable.

Pimples: I am sorry, but the article you mention, I believe, is a proprietary article and I cannot give advice on these. I would not advise you to use anything on your skin without knowing just what it is and what it will do. Everybody cannot use the same creams or lotions on their faces. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you my treatment for removing freekles and pimples.

Gertrude: Young girls should have rosy lips always. When young lips become pale and colorless look to the diet at once. Schoolgirls would rather live on a diet of sweets and pickles than one of soup and vegetables. Too much vinegar will not only make the lips pale, but will thin out the blood until all color disappears from the face as well. A dangerous habit is biting the lips to make them red. A wide, short fingered hand is proof positive that its owner is a working man or weman. Does sal hepatica injure one in any way?

Reply: Perhaps the dentists are trying to corner the market on new teeth. I don't think lime water or listerine are worth a tinker's small mound of sand for the teeth. Sal hepatica, in my opinion, does more harm than good. It is absolutely nothing more than an effervescing saline cathartic, but salines are injurious if habitually used.

Mrs. B. F. W. writes: Will you kindly tell me how I can have a wen on my head removed without surgery?
Reply: A wen is a sebaceous or oil gland which has become obstructed, so that the secretion accumulates and forms a soft sac. I know of no way to remove a wen except by inclsion and removal of the sac. This can be done in the doctor's office, under local anesthesia, painlessly, bloodlessly, in five minutes. Why look for an easier way?

Is your skin tender? Try Resinol Soap

Any soap will clean your skina bar of laundry soap will do if you do not care what becomes of your complexion. But you know that laundry soap contains harsh, drying alkali that would ruin your skin and hair, so you never think of using it for your toilet.

Many toilet soaps contain this same injurious alkali. Resinel Soap contains absolutely no free alkali, and to it are added the Resinol balsams. These give it seething, healing properties which clear the complexion, comfort tender skins and keep the hair rich and lustrous, Signs of Pellagra.

The characteristic picture of pellagra is (1) a darkening and roughening of the skin of the hands and wrists and of various other portions of the body: (2) nervous or mental symptoms, in tome cases a form of melancholia or general nervous depression; and (3) long-standing digestive disturbances, including sore mouth and tongue, extensive salivation, loss of appetite, repeated vomiting spells, and usually regular diarrhea.

Any patient showing that triad of signs and steadily losing strength, should be considered possibly pellagrous.

Since the cause is not positively recognized, there is no satisfactory treatment for pellagra, at least no specific remedy. Many cases grow gradually worse in spite of all symptomatic and supportive treatment. And many others respond to good diet and general hygienic measures.

It is interesting to know that Dr. Harris, of New Orleans, has recently succeeded in inoculating monkeys with a disease corresponding in all symptoms with pellagra, by injecting emitons with pellagra, by injecting emitons with pellagra. These experiments tend to put the malze theory of causation into the discard.
